

MANUFACTURER BRINGS 120 JOBS TO NEW MEXICO

Santa Teresa, N.M. May 21st, 2018 – Today, Governor Susana Martinez announced that Corrugated Synergies International (CSI) is expanding to Santa Teresa, creating 120 new manufacturing jobs. The company will invest more than $31 million in infrastructure, production equipment, and the renovation of their new facility. New Mexico successfully competed against Nevada and Texas. "Once again, the power of New Mexico's economic development tools are on full display," said Governor Martinez. "When we create a business-friendly environment we attract companies, like Corrugated Synergies International, that make an incredible difference in our communities by creating good jobs for New Mexicans."

CSI is headquartered in Renton, Washington and is an innovative leader in sheet feeding for the corrugated cardboard industry.

"We are proud to be making a long-term investment in New Mexico by placing our newest manufacturing facility in Santa Teresa," said John Perullo CEO of CSI. "New Mexico's business-friendly climate made the decision to come to New Mexico an easy one. The Governor's visit to our corporate headquarters in the Pacific Northwest underscored the State's commitment to welcome us."

Under Governor Martinez, New Mexico has invested nearly $130 million in infrastructure improvements in Santa Teresa to attract businesses to the area, including roadway reconstruction and rehabilitation, flood control, water & wastewater infrastructure, roads, an airport fire station, and a port of entry visitor center, among many others.

"Thanks to a series of bold reforms and bolstered economic development tools, we're better equipped to recruit companies to our state," said President and CEO of the New Mexico Partnership, Tim Nitti. "Through our collaborative efforts, we're recruiting new businesses to New Mexico."
